Mrs. Puchu, his mother, had said wonderingly, to one of her neighbors, that with all her knowledge of Galen, that she candidly believed, she in reality knew little about him. She was almost sure that Galen could not tell the difference in taste between quinine and sugar, as she had never heard him express disgust at one, nor his pleasure in the taste of the other; that she was almost sure, from a previous experience that he could not tell the difference in odor from the smell of the most fragrant rose to that disgusting odor which came from a jimson weed. As for Galen's taste for music, he never had been responsive, and she was morally certain, that if life depended upon it, that she did not believe that Galen could tell the difference in tune from Home...
